

Dr. Timothy Fitzgerald (University of Stirling)

Timothy Fitzgerald (PhD) is a Reader in Religion at the School of Languages, Cultures and Religions at the University of Stirling, Scotland, UK.

His research interest include: anthropology of Japan; anthropology of India; meditation; analysis of discourses on “religion and the secular”, “religion and politics”, “religion and the State” and other such rhetorical constructs; history, theory and method in the study of religion; orientalism as a theory and problems of representing others.

His current research interest is in the development of networks or configurations of modern English language categories since the 16th century, such as religion, politics, the secular, the sacred and the profane, economics and secular law.

Selected publications:

- “Religion and Politics in International Relations: The Modern Myth”, London and New York, Continuum, 2011.
- “Discourse on Civility and Barbarity: a critical history of religion and related categories”, Oxford and New York, Oxford University Press, 2007.
- “Religion and the Secular: Historical and Colonial Formations” (editor), Equinox, 2007.
- “The Ideology of Religious Studies”, Oxford University Press, New York, 2000.

More information: <http://www.slcr.stir.ac.uk/staff/showstaff.php?id=20>